FIVE GIRLS DROWNED.

A rowing party composed of seven girls and one boy, all residents of Lurist, a small village on the east bank of New River, in Giles county, Va., left that place late Sunday afternoon, intending to take a moonlight ride of several miles down the stream in a small skiff. When the boat reached mid-stream just opposite the town, where the river is a half-mile wide and the current swift owing to the rains of the past several days, it got beyond the control of the rowers, and after floundering around for a few minutes was seen to capsize and disappear. A party on shore who had witnessed the overturning of the craft went in a boat to rescue the children, but their efforts only resulted in saving the boy and two of the girls, the other five not again coming to the surface. The drowned were: Belle Robinson, aged 14; Ella Robinson, aged 12; Anna Holliday, aged 11; Eva Steves, aged 9; Eula Steves, aged 8. The Robinson girls were sisters and were the daughters of John A. Robinson, a railroad contractor. The two Steves girls were the daughters of Mrs. M. A. Steves, widow of a train dispatcher. The Holliday girl was the daughter of N. W. Holliday, a merchant. The bodies of the Steves sisters and the Holliday girl have been recovered. The river is still being dragged for the other two victims. The recovered bodies were found some distance from the spot where they went down.

TRIED TO KILL HIS WIFE.—Daniel Hendrickson, once one of the wealthiest men in Monmouth county, N. J., and until recently in the banking business, was locked up in the Atlantic Highlands, N. J., jail yesterday on a charge of attempting to kill his wife as she was returning to her father's home Sunday night. Hendrickson is 25 years old. Mrs. Hendrickson was formerly Miss Bertha Willett, daughter of George Willett, a wealthy farmer of Port Monmouth. She married Hendrickson four years ago when she lay ill in bed and was not expected to survive an attack of typhoid. The young man then had a prosperous business, but a short time ago was declared bankrupt. Differences between the couple led to their separation, and Mrs. Hendrickson returned to her father's home with her two children. In the last few weeks the young man has made frequent appeals to his wife to return all as she was ignored. On Sunday Hendrickson went up to her and told her that she would have to return to him. "If you don't," he said, "I will kill you." The young man replied firmly that she could never live with him again. "Then I will kill you now," cried Hendrickson, drawing a revolver and placing it against the head of his wife. With his free hand he seized his wife by the hair, so that she could not escape the bullet and pulled the trigger. The cartridge failed to explode, and before he could make a second attempt the young woman's father, who had followed the couple, seized his arm and took the revolver away from him. Hendrickson is a young giant, from fight with all his strength to free himself and attack his wife. The old farmer, though a much smaller man, is unusually powerful and managed to hold his son-in-law until assistance arrived. Then the young man, still fighting and struggling, was bound and taken to jail.

PLAN TO WRECK TRAIN.—A plan to wreck Norfolk and Western passenger train No. 3 was frustrated Sunday night by the quick work of Baldwin's detectives at New River station, and eight desperate characters were arrested and lodged in the Radford jail. Dan Baldwin, who is temporarily in charge of the agency at Roanoke, received a telegram from Radford Sunday afternoon, to the effect that the gang of desperadoes had perfected a plan to blow up the train running between Norfolk and Columbia with dynamite. All the detectives who could be reached were ordered to Radford and the men were soon located. Under cover of darkness they were surrounded by eight well-armed detectives and when called upon to surrender made a dash for their arms, which were stacked near by. They were taken so completely by surprise and the muzzles of eight Winchester sawed them that they surrendered without a struggle. A search was instituted and eight large sticks of dynamite were found concealed near the railroad track. The party was known to have had two valises, but they could not be found. An effort was made yesterday to ascertain who and what the men are, but they refuse to talk or tell their names. Railroad detectives are certain they have a number of noted crooks. Officer Robinette is sure that one of them is the same man who was arrested at Bluestone Junction a few days ago, who had a full kit of burglar's tools and who afterward escaped.
